Performance-wise, the library continued to pursue all of the goals established in the 2010-2015 Strategic Plan. Circulation topped the 1,250,000 mark, programming attendance was at an all-time high of 43,979 and the collection swelled to nearly 280,000 materials, including adding digital music and magazines to the collection. Additionally, the Summer Reading Program had its highest participation ever with over 4,700 children and adults registered.

Over the course of the year, one thing was quite noticeable. The Fayetteville community loves its library. In fact, some could say they are “loving it to death.” Programming space was maxed out, sometimes to the point of having to hold programs twice to accommodate the crowds. Meeting rooms were consistently full during all operating hours. The computer lab frequently had people waiting their turn to use the computers, and the shelves were near maximum capacity. To address the situation, the Library Board of Trustees commissioned Blair Library architect Jeffrey Scherer to update the Fayetteville Public Library Master Plan. This work will begin early next year and will chart the path forward for the library for the next 20 years.

2012 was a year of change, accomplishment, and celebration for the library. In February, I accepted the leadership role of Executive Director following the admirable service of Lolly Greenwood as Interim Executive Director in 2011. We quickly filled the open Manager of Accounting and Human Resources position and the Manager of Marketing and Communication position. In addition to filling all open positions, several organizational changes were made as well.

With an eye toward professional development and growth among the library team members, it was important to focus on succession planning and building management “bench strength” in the various departments. Several “Assistant Manager” positions were created that will allow people in those roles to develop the management experience that is required for manager’s roles.

Additional change was made in how the library conducts business. Most notably was the implementation of a bottom-up, needs-based budgeting process. Each department was asked, “What does it take for you to run your business,” and we challenged each department to think of themselves as a small business. Unlike previous top-down budgeting models, this allowed each department to have full transparency into what it takes to “keep the lights on” and full control over how their resources are allocated.

2012 saw the achievement of the coveted National Endowment for the Humanities Challenge Grant. Awarded in 2007, the library was able to raise a triple match of $1.8 million dollars to match the $600,000 challenge from the NEH. Once all pledges are received the library will have a $2 million endowment for humanities collections and programs. This achievement was made in no small part by a $250,000 gift from the Friends of the Fayetteville Public Library, the single largest gift given to the grant.

To celebrate the achievement of the NEH grant and the premiere of the Larry Foley directed documentary film Up Among the Hills: The Story of Fayetteville, the library held a “Light Up The Night” gala celebration. The library was literally transformed into a spectacular red carpet, black-tie Hollywood premiere theater. A full white table cloth dinner was served to over 600 guests, many of whom traveled from out of state back to Fayetteville for the event. Fayetteville, its history, and its citizens were celebrated on a grand scale that will not be seen for years to come.

Sincerely,

David Johnson,
Executive Director

2012 Highlights Calendar

February: Fayetteville Public Library’s Otwell Teen Library was selected for the American Library Association Library Design Showcase 2012 in three categories: Technology Enabled; Small Project, Big Impact; and Youth Spaces.

March 13: Clare Vanderpool, author of the 2011 Newbery Award-winning book, Moon Over Manifest, visited with over 780 4th – 7th graders throughout the afternoon. Ms. Vanderpool’s visit was in partnership with the Fayetteville Public School system.

June 2: The library kicked off Summer Reading Club with activities and events for the entire family, adults included. The program had its most successful year yet with over 4,000 participants.

August 24: The Fayetteville Public Library served as host to its neighbor to the north, National Public Radio affiliate KUAF, for a live broadcast kicking off the 3rd annual Fayetteville Roots Festival, a celebration of the food, music, and culture of the Ozarks.

October 19: The library hosted the world premiere of the documentary film Up Among the Hills: The Story of Fayetteville, written and produced by Emmy Award-winning director Larry Foley. The gala event included cocktails and dinner for over 600 guests.

October 26: Pulitzer Prize-winning author, David K. Shipler, was the guest of honor at the 9th annual Gathering of the Groups hosted by the library. He shared insight into his book The Working Poor, which was part of the University of Arkansas’s One Book, One Community Project.

December: The Board of Trustees approved a space needs study for the library which will result in an updated 20-year Master Plan for the library. The study will be conducted by Meyer, Scherer & Rockcastle, LTD from Minneapolis, MN, the architecture firm responsible for the Blair Library building.
